War Pilot Memoirs: A Mirror on 1939

From the left-hand photograph to the one on the right, sixty-nine years have gone by. My hesitation to write was overcome when an Apollo astronaut, guest speaker at our pilots' reunion, with a firm hand on my shoulder, told me, “Coming generations need to hear your personal stories surrounding the defeat of the Nazis.” From the 1940 inception of General de Gaulle's forces in England to the cockpit of my P-47 Thunderbolt five years later over Pointe de Grave, then back to Southeast Asia for tiger hunts, my translator calls it “cliffhanger nonfiction.” Wow, I guess it is.
